PRINCE HENRY HERE

He Reached New York after One Day's Delay on Voyage.

ROYALLY WELCOMED

Salute after Salute Fired, Whistles Sounded and Thousands Gathered to See the Distinguished Visitor—Calls Were Made.

New York, Feb. 24.—Prince Henry of Prussia, representative of his brother, the emperor of Germany, at the launching of the latter's American-built yacht, reached New York Sunday, and was cordially welcomed as a guest of the nation. The land batteries that guard the outer harbor sounded the first greeting in a ponderous salute of 21 guns, the rifles of a special naval squadron assembling in his honor, echoed the sentiment, there were verbal greetings from the representatives of President Roosevelt, the army and navy and the city of New York, and a great crowd lined the way into the city to see and cheer the sailor prince of Germany. The genius of Marconi, reaching out from the storm-swept coast, had definitely located the belated liner and made certain the hour that she would reach Sandy Hook. There was a curtain off the hook early in the morning, and it was after 9 o'clock when the watchers caught the shadowy outlines of the cautiously approaching liner.

Rear Admiral Evans, commander of the special squadron, and honorary aide to the prince, left the flagship Illinois at 9:40 o'clock in the naval tug, Nina. With him were his chief of staff and aides.

Prince Henry, attired in the uniform of an admiral of the German navy, and surrounded by his naval and military staff in brilliant uniform, stood on the bridge of the liner. As the naval tug drew nearer to the side of the steamship, Prince Henry and Admiral Evans caught sight of each other and exchanged formal salutes. As the two vessels, with a flotilla of tugs and official craft move in past Fort Wadsworth the first of the salute of 21 guns was fired. As the first gun sounded, the prince advanced to the end of the bridge of the Kron Prinz Wilhelm and stood at attention. As he passed the big American flag floating over the fortifications he touched his cap in salute and the members of his suite did likewise. The flag at the jack-staff of the Kron Prinz was dipped, and the German naval band accompanying the prince played "The Star Spangled Banner."

The guns of Fort Wadsworth were not silent before those across the Narrows at Fort Hamilton boomed out their salute. Then the Kron Prinz was stopped and Admiral Evans and his staff boarded her. The admiral and the prince exchanged personal greetings.

At 10:50 the liner was abreast of the special squadron off Tompkinsville. The German standard was run to the foretop of the Kron Prinz and its appearance gave signal to the American fleet to salute. The San Francisco, Cincinnati, Olympia and Illinois, lay in perfect alignment in the order named and made an attractive picture with their crews manning sides, turrets and tops. They raised the German naval standard and then opened blank fire. The Prince stood at attention on the bridge and back of him were Admiral Evans and his staff and the numerous suite of the German visitor. The prince and his staff were especially interested in the Illinois and Olympia.

As the Kron Prinz cleared Tompkinsville the fleet of small craft around her increased, and they kept their whistles sounding. When the Kron Prinz came abreast of Governor's Island there was another salute, and the prince again stood at attention until the last of the 21 guns was fired.

New York and its surroundings have rarely shown to greater advantage than Sunday in the sunlight, with the added brightness that came from the glistening coating of snow, and the royal visitor did not leave the bridge during the run up the bay.

He knew the statue of liberty, Brooklyn bridge and the battery, and had heard the fame of the tall buildings. The famed sky-line that shows so well from the Jersey shore caught his attention, and he watched it until a tooting tug claimed a salute. The first of the large crowds was met at the battery, and from there on up to Recreation pier, where the largest crowd of all had gathered, every pier to which admission was not denied being partly filled. The welcome was a noisy one. To the Americans present he expressed his appreciation of the warm welcome extended to him.

The last greeting in the run up the river was from the imperial yacht Hohenzollern, which is to be the home of the Prince while in New York. She wore a full dress shape of flags and her white paint with its trimming of gold shone in the brilliant sun. Her jackies wore new uniforms and straw hats and manned the sides, while the officers in full dress uniform were drawn upon the deck. The prince smiled at the sight of her and again stepped to the end of the rail and saluted. The jackies of the Hohenzollern gave a lusty cheer and the Prince smiled and saluted again.

There was no demonstration at Recreation Pier for the Prince was not seen by the great crowd that choked up the end of West Thirty-fourth street. Cavalry squadron A of the National Guard of New York and a heavy force of police kept the pier clear.

Prince Henry disembarked at 12:55 p. m., and was met at the bottom of the Hohenzollern's gang plank by Admiral von Baudissin, commander of the Hohenzollern, and his officers.

Then callers began to arrive. They were of the United States army and navy, the mayor of New York and the German ambassador and a few consuls.

At 3:30 in the afternoon the prince returned the calls.

Prince Henry at night attended a reception given in his honor by the Deutscher Verein at the clubhouse of the organization, and immediately after this he gave a dinner on board the imperial yacht Hohenzollern. His guests, besides German naval and military officers, were:

David J. Hill, assistant secretary of state; Rear Admiral D. D. Evans, Major General Henry C. Corbin, Colonel Theodore A. Bingham, Commander Wm. Cowles, Ambassador von Holleben, General Director Wiegand of the North German Lloyd Steamship company, General Director Ballin of the Hamburg-American Steamship company, Gustav H. Schwab, Emil L. Boaz, Frederick W. Polls, E. Pionkowsky, Prof. Hugo Muensterberg, Hugo Zoeller, Dr. Maftle, director of Wolf Bureau of Germany; Captain Dannhauer, Melville E. Stone, Edward P. Call, Wm. Cullen Bryant, Howard Gould, Edward Uhl, Count von Zickendorf, Alfred C. Johnson, Rudolph Keppler, A. von Brissen, H. Conreid and Commander Nathan Sargent.

TILLMAN WILL RESIST

Does Not Propose That He Shall Be Deprived of a Vote.

WILL BE IN SENATE.

His Name Is Om'tted. He Will Challenge the Senate of the Right to Take Away the Vote of a State from Its Senator.

Washington, Feb. 24.—Senator Frye, president pro tem of the senate, gave directions to the clerks of the senate that the names of Senators Tillman and McLaurin of South Carolina must not be called on roll calls until further notice. This fixes the status of the senators who are practically suspended from all senatorial functions.

Senator Tillman will not accept the decision that he will not be allowed a vote. When the roll is called he will rise in his place and demand the right to vote, and present a formal protest against denial of a state the right to vote in the senate.

TILLMAN EXCLUDED.

President Withdraws an Invitation to Attend Dinner to Prince Henry.

Washington, Feb. 24.—The president withdrew his invitation to Senator Tillman of South Carolina to attend the dinner given to-night in honor of Prince Henry of Prussia at the White House. It is stated this action was made necessary by occurrences on the floor of the senate last Saturday, when Mr. Tillman was declared in contempt of the senate. Senator Martin of Virginia, a member of the committee on naval affairs, accepted an invitation in Mr. Tillman's place. The invitation was extended originally to Mr. Tillman owing to the fact he is the ranking minority member of naval affairs committee.

There was a sensational sequel to the decision of the president to eliminate Senator Tillman from the list of dinner guests. The president sent for Senator Cockrell of Missouri and asked him as a friend and Democratic colleague of Mr. Tillman to suggest to the latter the propriety of withdrawing his acceptance to his dinner invitation. The president explained his attitude in the matter and said that in view of contempt proceedings, Tillman's presence not only would be an affront to the senate, but a discourtesy to Prince Henry. Senator Cockrell accepted the commission, and later telephoned the president that Senator Tillman absolutely refused to withdraw his acceptance, in response to the president's suggestion. The president immediately cancelled the invitation in a note he dispatched directly to Tillman. In this note, which was very brief and formal, the president stated he regretted he was obliged to withdraw the invitation. Simultaneously Senator Martin of Virginia was invited to take Tillman's place at dinner as next ranking Democratic member of the naval affairs committee.

ASSAY OFFICES BLOWN UP.

It Is Supposed the Only Purpose Was to Destroy the Scales.

Victor, Col., Feb. 24.—Cripple Creek is in a state of terror owing to a preconcerted attack upon all leading assay offices doing business in the district. Beginning at 3 o'clock this morning and following in rapid succession six explosions wrecked as many assay offices ranging from Victor to Cripple Creek and up to gold field. In every instance the object sought by the incendiaries was accomplished, the destruction of the offices with their fine equipment of delicate balances. Raiders did not hesitate jeopardize life, as all but one of the buildings were also occupied by sleeping families. As it was, men, women and children were hurled out bed, by shocks and serious injuries inflicted. The full extent of the damage cannot be estimated.

Sheriff Robertson has called out deputies and is taking all means to discover perpetrators of crimes.

The general impression here is the acts are the result of a general movement to rid the district of all high grade ore purchasing institutions.

OLDEST POSTMASTER.

He Has Held the Same Office for Nearly Fifty-Two Years.

His commission has never been revoked; the man who signed his bond are still alive and on his bond. His wife has been his deputy through all these years, and the office is still in the building where it was first located in 1851. He is believed to be the oldest postmaster in Iowa. Owing to rural mail delivery the office will be dropped from the list.

TILLMAN WILL RESIST

Does Not Propose That He Shall Be Deprived of a Vote.

WILL BE IN SENATE.

His Name Is Om'tted He Will Challenge the Senate of the Right to Take Away the Vote of a State from its Senator.

Washington, Feb. 24.—Senator Frye, president pro tem of the senate, gave directions to the clerks of the senate that the names of Senators Tillman and McLaurin of South Carolina must not be called on roll calls until further notice. This fixes the status of the senators who are practically suspended from all senatorial functions.

Senator Tillman will not accept the decision that he will not be allowed a vote. When the roll is called he will rise in his place and demand the right to vote, and present a formal protest against denial of a state the right to vote in the senate.

TILLMAN EXCLUDED.

President Withdraws an Invitation to Attend Dinner to Prince Henry.

Washington, Feb. 24.—The president withdrew his invitation to Senator Tillman of South Carolina to attend the dinner given to-night in honor of Prince Henry of Prussia at the White House. It is stated this action was made necessary by occurrences on the floor of the senate last Saturday, when Mr. Tillman was declared in contempt of the senate. Senator Martin of Virginia, a member of the committee on naval affairs, accepted an invitation in Mr. Tillman's place. The invitation was extended originally to Mr. Tillman owing to the fact he is the ranking minority member of naval affairs committee.

There was a sensational sequel to the decision of the president to eliminate Senator Tillman from the list of dinner guests. The president sent for Senator Cockrell of Missouri and asked him as a friend and Democratic colleague of Mr. Tillman to suggest to the latter the propriety of withdrawing his acceptance to his dinner invitation. The president explained his attitude in the matter and said that in view of contempt proceedings, Till-man's presence not only would be an affront to the senate, but a discourtesy to Prince Henry. Senator Cockrell accepted the commission, and later telephoned the president that Senator Tillman absolutely refused to withdraw his acceptance, in response to the president's suggestion. The president immediately cancelled the invitation in a note he dispatched directly to Tillman. In this note, which was very brief and formal, the president stated he regretted he was obliged to withdraw the invitation. Simultaneously Senator Martin of Virginia was invited to take Tillman's place at dinner as next ranking Democratic member of the naval affairs committee.

ASSAY OFFICES BLOWN UP.

It Is Supposed the Only Purpose Was to Destroy the Seals.

Victor, Col., Feb. 24.—Cripple Creek is in a state of terror owing to a preconcerted attack upon all leading assay offices doing business in the district. Beginning at 3 o'clock this morning and following in rapid succession six explosions wrecked as many assay offices ranging from Victor to Cripple Creek and up to gold field. In every instance the object sought by the incendiaries was accomplished, the destruction of the offices with their fine equipment of delicate balances. Raiders did not hesitate jeopardize life, as all but one of the buildings were also occupied by sleeping families. As it was, men, women and children were hurled out bed, by shocks and serious injuries inflicted. The full extent of the damage cannot be estimated.

Sheriff Robertson has called out deputies and is taking all means to discover perpetrators of crimes.

The general impression here is the acts are the result of a general movement to rid the district of all high grade ore purchasing institutions.

OLDEST POSTMASTER.

He Has Held the Same Office for Nearly Fifty-Two Years.

Dubuque, Feb. 24.—The postoffice at Campton, Iowa, is to be discontinued.
It has a unique record. On Sept. 15, 1851, A. V. Brown was appointed postmaster, and has held the office ever since. His commission has never been revoked; the man who signed his bond are still alive and on his bond. His wife has been his deputy through all these years, and the office is still in the building where it was first located in 1851. He is believed to be the oldest postmaster in Iowa.
Owing to rural mail delivery the office will be dropped from the list.

Rear End Collision.

Philadelphia, Feb. 24.—Read end collision between a Moristown accommodation train and a Reading accommodation at Coshockton wrecked two cars and injured a number of passengers.

Fighting Montenegro.

Cettinji, Montenegro, Feb. 24.—

wounded during a fight which occurred on the Montenegro frontier between Albanians and Turkish regular troops.

About the Cannery.

Mr. J. A. Freeman told the Eagle reporter that he had never joined the truckers' association nor taken any interest in it until he saw the movement started to get a cannery. When he saw that, he determined to help the move to get a cannery first, and, if that is successful, he will then go to planting truck. His fear about truck growing to ship is that a lot of stuff will be grown, a few acres, perhaps, sold successfully at paying prices, and then the rest—a great lot of stuff—left on hand, with no way to dispose of it. The cannery would open a sure market for that part of it and would make truck growing practicable, bringing in money at a season when it is badly needed.

Mr. Freeman promptly subscribed $25 stock to the cannery, and went to work and secured subscriptions of $95 more from others.

His view of the matter is that taken by many representative farmers, and it is a sensible way of looking at it.

Let the cannery scheme be pushed.

About the Cannery.

Mr. J. A. Freeman told the Eagle reporter that he had never joined the truckers' association nor taken any interest in it until he saw the movement started to get a cannery. When he saw that, he determined to help the move to get a cannery first, and, if that is successful, he will then go to planting truck. His fear about truck growing to ship is that a lot of stuff will be grown, a few acres, perhaps, sold successfully at paying prices, and then the rest—a great lot of stuff—left on hand, with no way to dispose of it. The cannery would open a sure market for that part of it and would make truck growing practicable, bringing in money at a season when it is badly needed.

Mr. Freeman promptly subscribed $25 stock to the cannery, and went to work and secured subscriptions of $95 more from others.

His view of the matter is that taken by many representative farmers, and it is a sensible way of looking at it.

Let the cannery scheme be pushed.

BRAIN-FOOD NONSENSE.

Another ridiculous food fad has been branded by the most competent authorities. They have dispelled the silly notion that one kind of food is needed for brain, another for muscles, and still another for bones. A correct diet will not nourish a particular part of the body, but it will sustain every other part. Yet, however good your food may be its nutritive is destroyed by indigestion or dyspepsia. You must prepare for their appearance or prevent their coming by taking regular doses of Green's August Flower, the favorite medicine of the healthy millions. A few doses aids digestion, stimulates the liver to healthy action, purifies the blood, and makes you feel buoyant and vigorous. You can get Dr. G. G. Green's reliable remedies at Wilson-Jenkins Drug Co.'s store. Get Green's Special Almanac.

HER GIANT FOLDING BED

By C. B. LOOMIS

Copyright, 1901, by C. B. Loomis

It was against Mr. Bentley's advice that Cora bought the giant folding bed. They lived on the sixth floor in a small "five-rooms-and-a-bath-steam-heated-all-improvements" flat, and he said that such a huge folding bed was out of all proportion to the size of the bedroom. But Mrs. Bentley had set her heart on it, and Mr. Bentley has not been husband so long as to feel like thwarting any legitimate wish.

When she went down to the store, she found she was just in time to get one at half price. What luck! She had expected to pay $35 for the bed, and she got it at $25, although by what process of arithmetic twenty-five becomes the half of thirty-five she did not stop to inquire.

But with the reduced price of the bed her good luck ended, and she entered upon a chapter of annoyances that would have made the bed dear as a gratuity.

The bed people were just moving out and were too busy to send the bed home. Five separate expressmen refused to stir their wagons when they learned that it was a giant. She began to wish that it was a trundle bed. But at last an expressman who was just starting in business and who was therefore inexperienced contracted for $2 to deliver it.

She reflected that the salesman had told her that it was a very convenient size, as one side of the room did not need to be papered when the bed was up, for it took up the entire wall space.

So she went and waited for the bed with all the ardor of a small child. Every time the dumb waiter blew she ran out to see if they were trying to send it up that way, but when it finally arrived after a wait of four hours it came in at the front door.

After ten minutes or so Mrs. Bentley heard mastodontic footsteps on the stairs, the swish of tearing wall paper, the crash of falling globes, and she knew that they were bringing the bed up stairs. So did all the other flat dwellers. When she looked over the staircase, there were from three to four heads beneath her, all looking down.

The arrival at different landings was punctuated by the crash of glass and the fall of plaster. And on the third floor the bed fell on one of the men. Luckily he was a fat German, and he escaped with a barked shin and a mild temper.

Long before that there was a string of home returning heads of families separated from their little ones by the Chinese wall of a bed. Those who were athletic enough climbed over and escaped to their apartments, but the rest had to content themselves with throwing kisses to their beloved ones and telling them not to despair.

Mrs. Bentley had not hitherto known there were so many people living in the house. The stairs were black with them, and the bed moved with the deliberation of a glacier.

When the men reached the fourth floor, they clamored for beer, and Mrs. Bentley, being inexperienced, sent for two bottles, which were brought in by the janitor's son.

The two men sat down, or, rather, up, way up, on the bed and opened a bottle apiece amid groans from the belated flat dwellers who lived above the third. It is probable that they had already solaced themselves with beer, for they became very merry and loquacious after the bottles had been emptied, and many of their jokes would not have been allowed at a variety theater.

There is a saying that there is always room at the top. This did not prove to be the case in regard to the giant bed. The hallway at the top flat was a joint affair, two suits opening on it, and it was the narrowest in the building. When the men finally arrived with their tremendous load, they found that it was going to be a Chinese puzzle to get into Mrs. Bentley's. They shattered the last globe and then sat down on the stairs to ponder.

They finally came to the conclusion that they could not get it in unless the door of the opposite apartment were opened to admit of its being slewed around.

Mrs. Cochran was the opposite neighbor. She and Mrs. Bentley had been as distant as such contiguous flat dwellers could be. Their bows in the hall were as icy as the hall itself. Mrs. Cochran thought Mrs. Bentley a foolish little new wife, and Mrs. Bentley thought Mrs. Cochran common.

Still, there was nothing for it but to ask Mrs. Cochran to open her front door and let the man swing the bed into the doorway for just one moment.

The fat man rang her bell. She opened the door, with fire in her eyes. She had been trying to get the youngest to sleep, and the constant thumping and crashing and the oburgations and beery laughter of the expressmen had rolled the not too placid waters of her disposition to a foaming point.

Mrs. Cochran glowered.
"Oh!" said Mrs. Bentley, with a hastily made veneer of sweetness. "May the men just swing the bed into your hallway so that they can get it into my doorway? I didn't suppose it was so big. I don't think it was so big in the store."

Mrs. Cochran sniffed at the inanity of the remark, but she said:

"Oh, I suppose I can't refuse. I hope you'll quit your thumping after you get it in. I can't get my child to sleep while it's going on."

"I'm sure it will only be a minute. You see, the worst is over."

"I should hope so," said Mrs. Cochran, looking at the dents in the wall and the broken globes. And then the two expressmen put their shoulders to the bed and swung it into the doorway with such vehemence that it stuck like a fat cork in a small bottle and refused to budge.

"Well, this is a pretty state of things," said Mrs. Cochran from behind the bed. "How do you suppose we're going to close our front door with that great bed in the way?"

"You won't need to close it. No one will come in while der bet is dere. It is better as a door." And the German laughed uproariously and fatly.

"Oh, but this is too awful!" said Mrs. Bentley, wringing her hands helplessly.

"I should think it was," came the voice of Mrs. Cochran from the other side of the bed.

"Is your husband in there? Can't he help push?" suggested Mrs. Bentley.

"No," snapped Mrs. Cochran. "He hasn't come home yet, and, what's more, he can't until this barricade is removed. How anybody but a fool could have bought such a monstrous thing I don't see!"

At this juncture Mr. Cochran came up stairs, with Mr. Bentley just behind him. Mr. Cochran looked puzzled. Mr. Bentley groaned. He had come home too soon.

"What are you doing to the bed?" asked Mr. Cochran.

"We ain't doin' a t'ing to id," said the fat German joyously.

Bentley and Cochran laughed, but Mrs. Bentley saw no humor in the remark, and certainly Mrs. Cochran saw no funny side to the bed. Both sides seemed tragic to her.

"Is that you, George?" she called out.

"Yes, it's me. Shall I come in?"

"You can't except by the fire escape," said Mrs. Cochran despairingly.

"What are you doing with it in the wrong door?" asked Mr. Bentley of the expressmen.

"Sure, 'twould have shtook as fasht in anny dure," said the Irish expressman, and the German roared sympathetically.

Mr. Cochran is a man of action. "Here: we four men ought to be able to move a little be—a bed. Now, altogether; pull!"

Mr. Cochran is a successful politician, but he had the wrong kind of pull with him, and the only result of the effort was that Mr. Bentley pulled off some of the molding and fell on his back.

Nothing daunted, Mr. Cochran said, "Let's go around by way of the fire escape and push."

The two expressmen and Mr. Cochran made nothing of passing from Mrs. Bentley's parlor to Mrs. Cochran's parlor by the fire escape, but Mr. Bentley is light headed and had to be helped across—by his wife. Then the two entered the Cochran apartments, for the first time, like thieves in the night.

Now all six combined their strength and pushed, but the bed only laughed at them.

"Well, nothing more can be done now," said Cochran. "The bed is here, and it's got to stay here for the present. Now, you men might as well go about your business. You've done what you set out to do—the bed is up here fast enough."

"How much do I owe you?" asked Bentley of the German.

"Two dollars. I'll sent around a carpenter if you vand."

"Oh, no!" said Mrs. Bentley. "He'll be able to move it."

Back across the fire escape was Mr. Bentley helped by his faithful wife, and then they bade the Cochrans good night. It was such an impossible thing that had happened that everybody felt good natured once more, just as in a blizzard or a period of excessive heat people make light of their misfortunes and passersby joke one another.

Next morning immediately after breakfast Mrs. Bentley went down to the bed company to see whether they could suggest a way of getting the bed out of Mrs. Cochran's doorway.

They had moved, and a big sign in the window bore the legend, "To Be Opened In a Few Days as a Ladies' Luncheon."

For the space of two days that bed stood in the doorway while carpenter after carpenter came and looked at it and shook his head and went away.

Then came one who said: "I've seen those beds before. They ain't worth bothering with. The company's failed that made them. Now, next door to my shop is a vacant lot, and if I cut the bed to pieces I guess you can dump it there and the owner of the lot won't mind."

Mrs. Bentley hailed the scheme as a heaven sent proposition. Mr. Bentley was down town, and Mrs. Cochran, who was on the other side chatting with her—for in spite of what had come between them they were now quite friendly—seconded the plan.

The carpenter borrowed an ax of the janitor, and in a half hour's time, with the exception of the mirror, which was preserved intact, there was not a square foot of the bed unbroken.

The carpenter sent the pieces down on the dumb waiter and then took them away and presumably dumped them. Mrs. Cochran spent five minutes shutting and opening the door. It was so pleasant to be able to do it again.

Then Mrs. Bentley invited her neighbor into her flat and apologized for making so much trouble.

"It was no trouble at all, my dear. It has made something to talk about."

Now, Mr. Bentley seemed to think that $25 for the bed, $2 for delivery and $10 for damage to the hallways, together with the charge of the carpenter for the time it took him to destroy the bed, was rather a large amount to pay for a subject of conversation. So he isn't saying a word about it.

THE TOMBS' "ANGEL."

The Death of Mrs. Foster Affects the Inmates Over Her Demise.

New York, Feb. 24.—Memorial services were held in the Tombs prison for Mrs. Rebecca Foster, known as the "Tombs Angel," who was burned to death in the Park Avenue hotel fire.

For 12 years Mrs. Foster seldom had missed a Sunday in the Tombs. It is many years since she obtained the "run" of the prison. For a long while, like others, she went to the warden's office daily and obtained a pass to enter the gate. The daily issuance of passes became a burden, and finally on his own responsibility, Warden Fallon gave her permission to enter the place as she pleased. This courtesy was extended to her by other wardens.

In the woman's prison one service was held. Hardened women, who had withstood the efforts of Mrs. Foster, and who, time after time, when taken from their evil lives by her, had gone back to the old careers, cried like children.

Florence Burns, who is accused of killing Walter Brooks, was one of the last to come under the influence of Mrs. Foster. Convinced that the girl was innocent, Mrs. Foster had several talks with her. When the "Angel" did not appear on Saturday Florence asked for her and was told she had been killed. Florence was much affected, but it was not until the service Sunday that she gave way. Then she laid her head upon the shoulder of one of the matrons and sobbed.

All the co-workers with Mrs. Foster spoke of her self-sacrifice and the place she had filled in the hearts of hundreds whom she had rescued and sent away to lead better lives.

In the men's prison there was a service at which prisoners in whom Mrs. Foster had taken an interest were present. Some of the men were present when her name was mentioned, and wept.

ALMOST BURIED ALIVE.

Absence of Undertaker Saved a Man Who Had Been Frozen.

New York, Feb. 24.—Found frozen in a snowdrift and apparently dead, after Friday's storm, William Ferry, a farmer, near Anthony, N. J., lay for ten hours on the cooling board of an undertaker's shop, surrounded by coffins and the paraphernalia of death. But for the absence of the undertaker, he might have been buried alive.

Ferry was found lying in the snow. The body was cold and the supposed corpse was taken to an undertaking establishment. Half a dozen neighbors gathered to watch over the body. The absence of the undertaker prevented further action. When he arrived the party gathered in another room.

Upon their return to the cooling room they were horrified to find the supposed corpse missing. "Body snatchers" was their first thought. An alarm was sent out and a messenger hurried to Ferry's home. When he arrived Ferry was disposing of a hearty meal. He said he suddenly became conscious, and observing his surroundings, fled through a side door and hurried home.

GATES' BIG DEAL.

He Practically Owns Port Arthur and Now after New Orleans Waterworks.

Chicago, Feb. 24.—John W. Gates of Chicago, who has been in New Orleans several days looking over the waterworks plant of that city with Chapman H. Hyams and Albert Baldwin Jr., says a New Orleans special to the Tribune, with the idea of utilizing the mains and piping for distributing fuel oil over the city, affirms the above report. It is said the holders value the property at $2,000,000, besides a client amount to cover outstanding bonds.

Significant fact, says the dispatch, is recent deal in which John W. Gates acquired control of Port Arthur ship canal and it is said he already partially owns Port Arthur and the shipping facilities at the new Texas port, through which Beaumont oil product comes.

Refused to Take Jurisdiction.

Washington, Feb. 24.—The United States supreme court has delivered an opinion in the case of Minnesota versus the Northern Securities company in the application of the state to file a bill of complaint in that court. The opinion was read by Justice Shiras, and motion for leave to file denied on the ground the court was without jurisdiction.

A Mountain of Arsenic

Tacoma, Feb. 24.—John T. Davis and associates have discovered a mountain of arsenic in a range 50 miles southeast of Tacoma. This is claimed to be the first important body of arsenic ever found in America. The supply heretofore has come from Cornwall. United States now imports nearly $1,000,000 worth yearly.

Printing Department Investigation.

Committeeman Stafford and Expert Printer Smith have commenced investigation of the department of public printing.

Cortez Was Captured.

BRAIN-FOOD NONSENSE.

Another ridiculous food fad has been branded by the most competent authorities. They have dispelled the silly notion that one kind of food is needed for brain, another for muscles, and still another for bones. A correct diet will not only nourish a particular part of the body, but it will sustain every other part. Yet, however good your food may be, its nutriment is destroyed by indigestion or dyspepsia. You must prepare for their appearance or prevent their coming by taking regular doses of Green's August Flower, the favorite medicine of the healthy millions. A few doses aids digestion, stimulates the liver to healthy action, purifies the blood, and makes you feel buoyant and vigorous. You can get Dr. G. G. Green's reliable remedies at Wilson-Jenkins Drug Co.'s store. Get Green's Special Almanac.

HER GIANT FOLDING BED

By C. B. LOOMIS

Copyright, 1901, by C. B. Loomis

It was against Mr. Bentley's advice that Cora bought the giant folding bed. They lived on the sixth floor in a small "five-rooms-and-a-bath-steam-heated-all-improvements" flat, and he said that such a huge folding bed was out of all proportion to the size of the bedroom. But Mrs. Bentley had set her heart on it, and Mr. Bentley has not been husband so long as to feel like thwarting any legitimate wish.

When she went down to the store, she found she was just in time to get one at half price. What luck! She had expected to pay $35 for the bed, and she got it at $25, although by what process of arithmetic twenty-five becomes the half of thirty-five she did not stop to inquire.

But with the reduced price of the bed her good luck ended, and she entered upon a chapter of annoyances that would have made the bed dear as a gratuity.

The bed people were just moving out and were too busy to send the bed home. Five separate expressmen refused to stir their wagons when they learned that it was a giant. She began to wish that it was a trundle bed. But at last an expressman who was just starting in business and who was therefore inexperienced contracted for $2 to deliver it.

She reflected that the salesman had told her that it was a very convenient size, as one side of the room did not need to be papered when the bed was up, for it took up the entire wall space.

So she went and waited for the bed with all the ardor of a small child. Every time the dumb waiter blew she ran out to see if they were trying to send it up that way, but when it finally arrived after a wait of four hours it came in at the front door.

After ten minutes or so Mrs. Bentley heard mastodontic footsteps on the stairs, the swish of tearing wall paper, the crash of falling globes, and she knew that they were bringing the bed up stairs. So did all the other flat dwellers. When she looked over the staircase, there were from three to four heads beneath her, all looking down.

The arrival at different landings was punctuated by the crash of glass and the fall of plaster. And on the third floor the bed fell on one of the men. Luckily he was a fat German, and he escaped with a barked shin and a mislaid temper.

Long before that there was a string of home returning heads of families separated from their little ones by the Chinese wall of a bed. Those who were athletic enough climbed over and escaped to their apartments, but the rest had to content themselves with throwing kisses to their beloved ones and telling them not to despair.

Mrs. Bentley had not hitherto known there were so many people living in the house. The stairs were black with them, and the bed moved with the deliberation of a glacier.

When the men reached the fourth floor, they clamored for beer, and Mrs. Bentley, being inexperienced, sent for two bottles, which were brought in by the janitor's son.

The two men sat down, or, rather, up, way up, on the bed and opened a bottle apiece amid groans from the belated flat dwellers who lived above the third. It is probable that they had already solaced themselves with beer, for they became very merry and loquacious after the bottles had been emptied, and many of their jokes would not have been allowed at a variety theater.

There is a saying that there is always room at the top. This did not prove to be the case in regard to the giant bed. The hallway at the top flat was a joint affair, two suits opening on it, and it was the narrowest in the building. When the men finally arrived with their tremendous load, they found that it was going to be a Chinese puzzle to get into Mrs. Bentley's. They shattered the last globe and then sat down on the stairs to ponder.

They finally came to the conclusion that they could not get it in unless the door of the opposite apartment were opened to admit of its being slewed around.

Mrs. Cochran was the opposite neighbor. She and Mrs. Bentley had been as distant as such contiguous flat dwellers could be. Their bows in the hall were as icy as the hall itself. Mrs. Cochran thought Mrs. Bentley a foolish little new wife, and Mrs. Bentley thought Mrs. Cochran common.

Still, there was nothing for it but to ask Mrs. Cochran to open her front door and let the man swing the bed into the doorway for just one moment.

The fat man rang her bell. She opened the door, with fire in her eyes. She had been trying to get the youngest to sleep, and the constant thumping and crashing and the oburgations and beery laughter of the expressmen had rolled the not too placid waters of her disposition to a foaming point.

Mrs. Cochran glowered.
"Oh," said Mrs. Bentley, with a hastily made veneer of sweetness. "May the men just swing the bed into my hallway so that they can get it into my doorway? I didn't suppose it was so big. I don't think it was so big in the store."

Mrs. Cochran sniffed at the inanity of the remark, but she said:

"Oh, I suppose I can't refuse. I hope you'll quit your thumping after you get it in. I can't get my child to sleep while it's going on."
"I'm sure it will only be a minute. You see, the worst is over."

"I should hope so," said Mrs. Cochran, looking at the dents in the wall and the broken globes. And then the two expressmen put their shoulders to the bed and swung it into the doorway with such vehemence that it stuck like a fat cork in a small bottle and refused to budge.

"Well, this is a pretty state of things," said Mrs. Cochran from behind the bed. "How do you suppose we're going to close our front door with that great bed in the way?"

"You won't need to close it. No one will come in while der bet is dere. It is better as a door." And the German laughed uproariously and fatly.

"Oh, but this is too awful!" said Mrs. Bentley, wringing her hands helplessly.

"I should think it was," came the voice of Mrs. Cochran from the other side of the bed.

"Is your husband in there? Can't he help push?" suggested Mrs. Bentley.

"No," snapped Mrs. Cochran. "He hasn't come home yet, and, what's more, he can't until this barricade is removed. How anybody but a fool could have bought such a monstrous thing I don't see!"

At this juncture Mr. Cochran came up stairs, with Mr. Bentley just behind him. Mr. Cochran looked puzzled. Mr. Bentley groaned. He had come home too soon.

"What are you doing to the bed?" asked Mr. Cochran.

"Ve ahn't doin' a t'ing to id," said the fat German joyously.

Bentley and Cochran laughed, but Mrs. Bentley saw no humor in the remark, and certainly Mrs. Cochran saw no funny side to the bed. Both sides seemed tragic to her.

"Is that you, George?" she called out.

"Yes, it's me. Shall I come in?"

"You can't except by the fire escape," said Mrs. Cochran despairingly.

"What are you doing with it in the wrong door?" asked Mr. Bentley of the expressmen.

"Sure, 'twould have shtook as fasht in anny dure," said the Irish expressman, and the German roared sympathetically.

Mr. Cochran is a man of action. "Here; we four men ought to be able to move a little be—a bed. Now, altogether; pull!"

Mr. Cochran is a successful politician, but he had the wrong kind of pull with him, and the only result of the effort was that Mr. Bentley pulled off some of the molding and fell on his back.

Nothing daunted, Mr. Cochran said, "Let's go around by way of the fire escape and push."

The two expressmen and Mr. Cochran made nothing of passing from Mrs. Bentley's parlor to Mrs. Cochran's parlor by the fire escape, but Mr. Bentley is light headed and had to be helped across—by his wife. Then the two entered the Cochran apartments, for the first time, like thieves in the night.

Now all six combined their strength and pushed, but the bed only laughed at them.

"Well, nothing more can be done now," said Cochran. "The bed is here, and it's got to stay here for the present. Now, you men might as well go about your business. You've done what you set out to do—the bed is up here fast enough."

"How much do I owe you?" asked Bentley of the German.

"Two dollars. I'll sent around a carpenter if you vand."

"Oh, no!" said Mrs. Bentley. "He'll be able to move it."

Back across the fire escape was Mr. Bentley helped by his faithful wife, and then they bade the Cochrans good night. It was such an impossible thing that had happened that everybody felt good natured once more, just as in a blizzard or a period of excessive heat people make light of their misfortunes and passersby joke one another.

Next morning immediately after breakfast Mrs. Bentley went down to the bed company to see whether they could suggest a way of getting the bed out of Mrs. Cochran's doorway.

They had moved, and a big sign in the window bore the legend, "To Be Opened in a Few Days as a Ladies' Luncheon."

For the space of two days that bed stood in the doorway while carpenter after carpenter came and looked at it and shook his head and went away.

Then came one who said: "I've seen those beds before. They ain't worth bothering with. The company's failed that made them. Now, next door to my shop is a vacant lot, and if I cut the bed to pieces I guess you can dump it there and the owner of the lot won't mind."

Mrs. Bentley hailed the scheme as a heaven sent proposition. Mr. Bentley was down town, and Mrs. Cochran, who was on the other side chatting with her—for in spite of what had come between them they were now quite friendly—seconded the plan.

The carpenter borrowed an ax of the janitor, and in a half hour's time, with the exception of the mirror, which was preserved intact, there was not a square foot of the bed unbroken. The carpenter sent the pieces down on the dumb waiter and then took them away and presumably dumped them. Mrs. Cochran spent five minutes shutting and opening the door. It was so pleasant to be able to do it again.

Then Mrs. Bentley invited her neighbor into her flat and apologized for making so much trouble.

"It was no trouble at all, my dear. It has made something to talk about."

Now, Mr. Bentley seemed to think that $25 for the bed, $2 for delivery and $10 for damage to the hallways, together with the charge of the carpenter for the time it took him to destroy the bed, was rather a large amount to pay for a subject of conversation. So he isn't saying a word about it.

THE TOMBS' "ANGEL."

The Death of Mrs. Foster Affects the inmates Over Her Demise.

New York, Feb. 24.—Memorial services were held in the Tombs prison for Mrs. Rebecca Foster, known as the "Tombs Angel," who was burned to death in the Park Avenue hotel fire.

For 12 years Mrs. Foster seldom had missed a Sunday in the Tombs. It is many years since she obtained the "run" of the prison. For a long while, like others, she went to the warden's office daily and obtained a pass to enter the gate. The daily issuance of passes became a burden, and finally on his own responsibility, Warden Fallon gave her permission to enter the place as she pleased. This courtesy was extended to her by other wardens.

In the woman's prison one service was held. Hardened women, who had withstood the efforts of Mrs. Foster, and who, time after time, when taken from their evil lives by her, had gone back to the old careers, cried like children.

Florence Burns, who is accused of killing Walter Brooks, was one of the last to come under the influence of Mrs. Foster. Convinced that the girl was innocent, Mrs. Foster had several talks with her. When the "Angel" did not appear on Saturday Florence asked for her and was told she had been killed. Florence was much affected, but it was not until the service Sunday that she gave way. Then she laid her head upon the shoulder of one of the matrons and sobbed.

All the co-workers with Mrs. Foster spoke of her self-sacrifice and the place she had filled in the hearts of hundreds whom she had rescued and sent away to lead better lives.

In the men's prison there was a service at which prisoners in whom Mrs. Foster had taken an interest were present. Some of the men were present when her name was mentioned, and wept.

ALMOST BURIED ALIVE.

Absence of Undertaker Saved a Man Who Had Been Frozen.

New York, Feb. 24.—Found frozen in a snowdrift and apparently dead, after Friday's storm, William Ferry, a farmer, near Anthony, N. J., lay for ten hours on the cooling board of an undertaker's shop, surrounded by coffins and the paraphernalia of death. But for the absence of the undertaker, he might have been buried alive.

Ferry was found lying in the snow. The body was cold and the supposed corpse was taken to an undertaking establishment. Half a dozen neighbors gathered to watch over the body. The absence of the undertaker prevented further action. When he arrived the party gathered in another room.

Upon their return to the cooling room they were horrified to find the supposed corpse missing. "Body snatchers" was their first thought. An alarm was sent out and a messenger hurried to Ferry's home. When he arrived Ferry was disposing of a hearty meal. He said he suddenly became conscious, and observing his surroundings, fled through a side door and hurried home.

GATES' BIG DEAL.

He Practically Owns Port Arthur and Now after New Orleans Waterworks.

Chicago, Feb. 24.—John W. Gates of Chicago, who has been in New Orleans several days looking over the waterworks plant of that city with Chapman H. Hyams and Albert Baldwin Jr., says a New Orleans special to the Tribune, with the idea of utilizing the mains and piping for distributing fuel oil over the city, affirms the above report. It is said the holders value the property at $2,000,000, besides sufficient amount to cover outstanding bonds.

Significant fact, says the dispatch, is recent deal in which John W. Gates acquired control of Port Arthur ship canal and it is said he already practically owns Port Arthur and the shipping facilities at the new Texas port, through which Beaumont oil product comes.

Refused to Take Jurisdiction.

Washington, Feb. 24.—The United States supreme court has delivered an opinion in the case of Minnesota versus the Northern Securities company in the application of the state to file a bill of complaint in that court. The opinion was read by Justice Shiras, and motion for leave to file denied on the ground the court was without jurisdiction.
